HIT REFRESH

Living in harmony with Nature has been an integral part of Indian culture. Today, when people throughout the world are perturbed by the degradation of the environment and the disastrous consequences of this, traditional ethics of nature conservation could be looked upon as a source of inspiration and guidance for the future. Perhaps no other culture can provide such a profound variety of cultural practices and ecologically sound relationship with nature as the Indian. This has been abundantly reflected in a variety of traditional practices, religious beliefs, rituals, folklore, arts and crafts, and in the daily lives of the Indian people from time immemorial.

Many of the rituals which to modern society may seem meaningless and superstitious were traditional strategies to preserve the intrinsic relationship between man and nature. The worship of trees, animals, forests, rivers, and the sun, and considering the earth itself as Mother Goddess, were part of the Indian tradition.

The worship of Mother Earth is a universal phenomenon in many cultures. One of the finest examples of traditional practices in India based on religious faith which has made a profound contribution to nature conservation has been the maintenance of certain patches of land or forests as 'sacred groves'. In spite of the depletion of forests in many parts of India, some sacred groves still remain intact as oases in deserts, conserving rich biological diversity. In addition to that the recent studies have shown that Tulsi plant, which is considered sacred, releases Ozone (O_3) along with Oxygen (O_2), which is very essential for ecological balance. Further the scientific reason beyond decorating the door way with fresh and green mango leaves is that Photosynthesis helps in circulation of oxygen and in turn keeps the room temperature at an optimum level. The air filled with carbon dioxide, which is lighter than the pure air, gets purified immediately while passing through the chosen leaves decoration. In addition, insects get attracted to the green leaves. This stops the insects from entering the room.

There are also examples of sacred ponds attached to religious places of worship in many parts of India. Some of these have been responsible for the protection of certain endangered species of turtles, crocodiles, and the rare fresh water sponge.

The practice of throwing copper coins in the holy rivers was one of the ways our fore-fathers made to ensure us 99.9% infection free water, as rivers were the main source of drinking water. Making it a custom ensured that all of us follow the practice. If coins remain in rivers for a long time then it becomes beneficial for those who drink it.

In fact, Antimicrobial Copper and its alloys (e.g. brass and bronze) are registered with the US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) as being able to kill greater than 99.9% of infection causing bacteria within two hours of exposure.

To mention a few, such traditional cultural attitudes, have made significant contribution in the protection and propagation of various species of trees and plants in India. Moreover, many animals are considered sacred and worshipped and have thus received protection for centuries.

All these accounts vividly show how the ancient culture and traditions of Indian society contributed to the conservation of natural ecosystems, and the plants and animals that inhabited these. However, in the recent years we seem to have lost touch with our glorious tradition and wisdom of protecting nature. Environmental protection and sustainable development are concerns of such nature that permeate the entire humanity. Therefore, spinning the gossamer thread of human care and the environment should be the prime concern to each and every one of us!

Respect the Mother Nature, She Deserves more than what we could fathom!!!

The first day was an enriching one as they visited the Gargoti Museum, which displays the mineral treasures of the earth like rocks, minerals and crystals varying in nature, shape, colour and application. History Revisited

Memorable moments

JAIPUR AND RANTHAMBORE NATIONAL PARK GRADE 8 & 9

On the 8th of February, 2016, the students of Grade 8 and 9 of Pawar Public School, Chandivali, under the supervision of a few teachers, boarded the flight to embark upon an extremely enjoyable and highly informative educational tour to the vibrant and colourful Pink City of Jaipur and Ranthambore National Park.

The most unforgettable and cherishable aspect of the tour was the visit to the Ranthambore National Park. After an enlightening tour of the Ranthambore Fort the children were eagerly waiting for the tiger safari to have a glimpse of the tiger at one of the biggest and most renowned national parks of northern India, the Ranthambore National Park. The spine freezing chill of the early morning breeze in the open canter added to the adventurous spirit of the children as the canter chased the trail of the pugmarks of the tiger. However, to the disappointment of all the children, the tiger decided to evade the meeting and we had to be content with the sighting of the deer, sambhar, peacocks and some exotic birds.

In Jaipur the students were enthralled by the magnificence of the Amber Fort and the Jaigarh Fort. A visit to the City Palace and Central Museum was followed by the much awaited visit to the Jantar Mantar, which consists of nineteen instruments for measuring time, predicting eclipses, tracking the location of the major stars as the earth orbits around the sun and many more.

An evening spent at the Kanchan Kesari Resort was the icing on the cake as the children enjoyed camel rides and horse rides along with enticing magic shows and mesmerising Rajasthani dance shows. Not only did the children have an unforgettable experience, but they also returned far more enlightened and well-informed from this educational tour to the effervescent city of Jaipur and Ranthambore National Park.

FAREWELL ASSEMBLY BIDDING ADIEU

On 29th January, 2016, the pupils of Grade 9 had arranged for a farewell assembly to bid adieu to the outgoing pupils of Grade 10. The assembly was based on the theme 'Royalties' and the pupils had prepared for the same with great enthusiastic and meticulous planning.

The function began with a welcome song, followed by an inspirational speech by our Respected Principal Dr. Madhura Phadke. In her speech, she wished all the outgoing students good luck for their future.

The students of Grade 9 presented scintillating and entertaining performances. The highlight of the function was the Ramp Walk contest which was judged by the Chief Guests, Dr. Shashikumar Menon, Mrs. Meghana Sanghavi and Mrs. Sharmila Madiwale. MBA FOUNDATION

On the occasion of International Day of People with Disability on 6th December, 2015, MBA Foundation had organised an awareness programme based on the theme Empowerment of Differently Abled People at Powai.

The pupils of Pawar Public School, Chandivali participated in the event with immense vigour and enthusiasm. Under the able guidance of their facilitators the children presented a skit titled 'I am Possible', which staged some significant moments from the life of the eminent scientist Stephen William Hawkins.

The much read Hindi poem, Koshish Karne Walon Ki Haar Nahi Hoti by the renowned poet Harivanshrai Bachchan was interwoven with the English skit I am Possible and it was well received by the audience and organisers.

Beautiful explanation by Swami Vivekananda on Association

"The rain drop from the sky:

*If it is caught in hands,
it is pure enough for drinking.*

If it falls in a gutter, its value drops so much that it can't be used even for washing the feet.

*If it falls on hot surface,
it perishes.*

*If it falls on lotus leaf,
it shines like a pearl and finally,
if it falls on oyster, it becomes a pearl.*

*The drop is same,
but its existence & worth depend on
with whom it associates."*

Always be associated with people who are good at heart.

If I could be someone else...

I have always wondered if I could be someone else who would I be ? I always feel entangled in this question. But now I have found an answer for this question.

I have always wanted to be Mark Twain. It would be fantastic. Writing funny books is what I have always wanted to do. Writing The Adventures of Tom Sawyer would be really good. Comedy is what Mark Twain used to do the best. I wish I too had such a talent. He used to lighten sad people's life with stories. The times were really sad that time. He was the motivation for hundreds of lives, including me. I wish I was Mark Twain. I would light up lives and make a difference in sad people's lives. I would be in the list of the best authors of English Literature. Just thinking about it makes me really jealous but at the same time feel really good that someone can do a lot of development in English.

I really feel fantastic about a revolutionary author being born and doing great progress of English Literature. But I am also happy how I am myself and if I try hard, I can be as good as him and better, but what if I go to sleep and wake up finding myself in the life of Mark Twain. Wow!

Tanvi Joglekar - 6A

"Dogs are a man's best friend," this saying is quite true. Ever since I was a kid I've had a pet dog at home.

I used to have a black and white cocker spaniel named Bubbles. I didn't get to choose the name, because she was a part of the family even before I was. My mother once told me that when I was only a baby, Bubbles used to follow me around everywhere, she used to chase away the flies and mosquitoes which bothered me. She was the first friend I had. She was a very naughty puppy, or dog rather. I distinctly remember her stealing my father's phones and playing around with them in her mouth. She had once torn my blue Cinderella pillow, which I loved. I was mad at her but my rage couldn't last for a lot of time. I was only a kid.

Despite her mischief, she was a very obedient dog. She was known by the whole colony for her friendly nature. Everyone loved her dearly. Bubbles used to go downstairs for a walk herself and always managed to come back in time! We never had to worry about her getting lost, even if she did, as I told you, because of her reputation over the colony someone would call us and we would go to pick her up. As the years passed I became closer to her.

When she was around 11 years old she started developing a cataract in her eyes. We took her to the vet. She said nothing could be done about it. One more year passed, one of her kidney's failed and she got a skin disease. It was painful to watch her go through so much at one time. Then finally when she was 13 we could take it no more. Despite what the doctor had said we asked her for better medical treatment. The vet just shook her head and said "I'm sorry, but if we try to operate, it will cause her unbearable pain. I think you should put her to sleep." These last lines echoed in my head, I felt like someone had stabbed me ten times and then said it was okay. My mother and father looked sadly at Bubbles. I myself knew we would have to put her to sleep;

Sleep from which she could never wake up. We argued on it for a lot of time, and then my father said 'Natasha, I'm sorry but this has to be done. She is very old and we are causing only pain to her.' That was it on 10th September 2014, we took her to the hospital. I cried more than ever. Fear and pain shooting up my spine to my head. I kissed her good bye I looked into her beautiful innocent eyes for the last time. They finally put the injection in. I realized how much I loved her.

Watching the doctors do that was the hardest thing I have ever seen. Watching my friend who taught me love, loyalty and true friendship, die right in front of my eyes. Was the hardest thing I ever had to do. Watching Bubbles take her last breath, like the retreating waves of the ocean, was the hardest thing I ever had to do.

Scientists are getting closer to create a 'Thinking Robot'. What might be the consequence of this?

Gears are spinning in this digital world, brother. No use of your creativity, no use of your thinking capacity because there is someone better out there with a can of better quality lubricating oil. Man has created him and will repent, if not now, later... Technology is a creative world. In this world of fragile relations it is wonderful to have something permanently built. Technology is a boon! Machines make our lives so much better, easier and faster. In this 'fast forward' mode, scientists are having a tough time, competing with each other and inventing yet another piece of miracle.

"This robot shows emotions!" "This is a better one. It welcomes the customers and serves them whatever they want!" "I have made the best one – 'The Thinking Robot'!"

Early morning the newspaper was full of pictures and reports on the Thinkbot – the latest invention. The world was buzzing with this exciting news not realising they were celebrating their own doom. The waiters in the hotel, the drivers of the bus, all of them had been replaced by the latest angel of technology: The Robots. Now that the thinking robots were born, what is the use of 'being' human?

One man realized the danger of the thinking robots but the others laughed their heads off at him. Let me tell you what he thought, how his gears in his brain worked. The Thinking Robots "might", he said, they might overpower their own creators, they might take control of the world. Their weapons would be much more dangerous than an AK-47. Leaving them to do what they please, without control, world be as good as leaving a hungry lion alone with an unarmed man! There would be no need of news-reporters and editors. The robots will make it a world for themselves. Why I would get one myself to write this very 'Essay Writing Competition'!

God made man, the most developed creature with the best brain among the wild. Would this brain not lose its capacity to think in mechanical terms, would our brain not "rust" if we do not use them? Humans are bound to say, "Pah! Why should I think? I have the 'Thinking Robot' – my best friend, my protector, my guide, my voice! Even though I don't think of anything, he voices my thoughts!"

They made an army, those robots did, a general ten times of Adolf Hitler! They could think, ten times more than what Einstein thought! And yet it is man who made them!

"Don't!", he cried
 To persuade them, he tried
 But they heard him not
 And made the 'Thinking Robot'
 "It is a boon!", they thought
 But soon they knew
 When the robots fought
 That man's words were true,
 Gears whizzing in their brains
 Feeling strong and no pain
 They marched the Earth, feeling proud
 And the humans thought, "That man was indeed right!
 Our creation has overpowered us!"and that was the story of the – Thinking Robot.

Success...

Here's a simple, inevitable fact- all of mankind is a slave to time. We live like stuck between schedules and routines. We forget to stop for a while to enjoy the bittersweet uncertainty of life.

We labour all day and all night; all this for the sole purpose of attaining 'success.' Do we ever stop to wonder what success means?

The definition of success depends on the person in pursuit of it. For a person who labours day and night, burning the midnight oil, it may mean achieving a high position or reaching the top. To me, success is having lived life entirely; to make complete use of it and enjoy it while it lasts.

To tread unknown paths and hear unheard notes. To experience every feeling that exists, be it good or bad. The only reason time exists is so that all of this does not happen at once. Time is a blessing to us. Like the vast ocean, time is a conjoiner, concealer, poisoner and revelator. We flow with its smooth waves and end up on shores unknown. In this day and age, it is deeply saddening, rather tragic, that time has become nothing but a source of fear. Looking at the clock, one is reminded of deadlines and obligations; meetings and prior engagements.

We often find ourselves saying that we are 'running out of time.' If looked at from another perspective, we truly are. Life is too short to be so powerless and labour for time. The hands of the clock have become like the stick of a strict master' instilling fear into any slave that looks at them.

"Dust thou art and to dust thou shalt return." – A beautiful line from the Bible. We originate from dust and in the end, we return to it. So, what happens to all our efforts? Aren't they turned to dust as well?

So, we must make the best of the time of our lives, not letting it control us. Instead, we must be in complete control of time ourselves because 'all work and no play' shall definitely 'make Jack a dull boy.' We must flow with this ocean we call life, ending up in places that are completely unknown and finding ourselves in complete uncertainty because that is what counts most; that bittersweet, uncertain taste of life!
